MUSEUM OF THE MOVING IMAGE TO HONOR DEXTER GOEI OF ALTICE AND JAKE TAPPER OF CNN ON JUNE 12

New York, NY, April 23, 2018—Michael Barker and Ivan L. Lustig, Co-Chairmen of the Museum of the Moving Image, announced today that Dexter Goei, Chairman and CEO of Altice USA, and CNN anchor and chief Washington correspondent Jake Tapper will be honored at the Museum's annual benefit on Tuesday, June 12, 2018, at The St. Regis Hotel. Each spring, the Museum holds this event, recognizing top leaders in the media industry.

"We are delighted to be honoring Dexter Goei at our annual industry gala," said Lustig. "Under Dexter's leadership Altice USA has experienced extraordinary growth and is now one of leading broadband communications and video service providers in the country. We are also pleased to welcome the company to our neighborhood following their recent headquarters move to Long Island City."

Dexter Goei was appointed Chairman and CEO of Altice USA in June 2016 and is responsible for the company's overall strategic vision and growth in the United States. Altice USA is the country's fourth largest operator of cable telecommunications systems, which includes the Optimum and Suddenlink branded digital cable television, high-speed internet, voice, WiFi and data products and services across 21 states. Having joined Altice N.V., Altice USA's parent company, in 2009 as its CEO, Goei helped lead the company's development and growth from a French cable operator to a multinational telecommunications company operating in France, Portugal, Israel, the Dominican Republic and, most recently, its expansion into the U.S. with the creation of Altice USA. Prior to Altice, Goei was Co-Head of Morgan Stanley's TMT Group.

"Jake Tapper is among the most respected, trusted, and admired journalists on television," said the Museum's Executive Director Carl Goodman. "His intelligence and tenacity for uncovering the truth are well known. We are very pleased to be honoring him at our annual industry event."

CNN anchor and chief Washington correspondent Jake Tapper currently hosts a one-hour weekday program, The Lead with Jake Tapper, and CNN's Sunday morning show, State of the Union. Among other awards, his coverage of the 2016 election garnered him the 2017 Walter Cronkite Award for Excellence in Television Political Journalism. On State of the Union he conducts interviews with top newsmakers on politics and policy, covering Washington, the country, and the world. The Lead covers headlines from around the country and the globe with topics ranging from breaking news in politics and world events, to politics, money, sports, and popular culture. Before joining CNN in 2013, Tapper was at ABC News for nine years. He is also the author of three books, with a debut novel, The Hellfire Club, coming out April 24.
